HOUSTON, TX - Texas AgriLife
Extension Service (TEXAg)

researcher Dr. Kristi Smith has been awarded research funding by the National Potato Council (NPC) to conduct a trial evaluate the use of high-soluble phosphorus and inoculated molasses (IM) at two different application rates. “In the spring when potato seeds are planted, the phosphorus is available in the soil, but by fall it is often gone. The nitrogen and phosphorus are both critical for establishing healthy plants and in turn healthy potatoes,” says Dr. Smith. “This is the first time at both the North Central District Research Extension Center in Texarkana and the western district agricultural station in Crosby that we’re doing a multi-location phosphorus and IM trial.” The three year trial is being funded by a $200,000 grant from the NPC. Smith, along with other crop scientists, will be out in the field collecting data on the use of IM. When combined with phosphorus, the IM helps the potato plants establish better roots, continue to grow and improve disease resistance. Dr. Smith says a big bonus to the research is that potatoes are often grown in a floodplains. “When you are growing potatoes in a floodplain you can’t use very much inoculant,
